"The only thing we have is hummus"

Wakes up, gets out of bed, drags a comb across his head. Gets a drink at starbucks, where he writes lyrics to his new song on a 2013 macbook pro. Hypes himself up for like 30 minutes before going out on the street to perform. Makes about 5-15 bucks each night, but there's also a ~50% chance that he gets mugged every other night. Luckily he makes his guitar sound so bad that any robber would figure that it has negative value and decide not to steal it. He gets chicken nuggets from mcdonalds for every dinner. Lives with his parents.

Criteria For Success:

Wants literally anyone to think that his music is good. Dreams of making enough friends to form a band.

Needs

- Enough money to support his lifestyle of starbucks and mcdonalds.
- Friends.

Values

- Secretly he studies all sort of technical engineering for sound production just in case he ever gets enough money to buy an electric guitar. Has a beyond college level understanding of this information.

Wants

- A nicer tech setup.
- An electric guitar.
- His parents to love him.

Fears

- That his life is being Truman Show'd.
- Going to college.
- Not afraid of getting mugged but afraid that the muggers will think he is poor when they steal from him and thusly not want to be friends.
